Rat reticulocytes synthesize alpha and beta globin mRNA when cultured in the presence of erythropoietin. In contrast, the red cells from which reticulocytes are derived are devoid of haemoglobin synthesis. The cytoplasmic products of such reticulocyte maturation have been examined to learn how they relate to each other. Alpha globin mRNA is the first to be synthesized during maturation; it contains 50 nucleotides that are excised from the alpha globin mRNA of mature red cells during the final stages of maturation. The loss of this segment of alpha globin mRNA (exon 5) is temperature-dependent and does not occur in reticulocytes cultured in the absence of external androgens. "The delay has happened because the original offer was rejected," said the AAP government, attributing its failure to hang on to the land on the grounds that it would have to pave a canal on the site. However, a senior urban development ministry official told The Hindu: "The AAP government had offered to share all land acquisition costs. The party, which has
